GOPEL TEMPERANCE MEETING on Saturday evening this week at the old place. All interested and non-interested are invited to attend.

PARK M. E. CHURCH.—Services appropriate to the Fourth of July. "The Elements of Civil and Religious Liberty" will be the theme of discourse on tomorrow (Sabbath) evening by the pastor, Rev. D. R. Lowrie. The Pierson Post G. A. R. will be present. All others interested are cordially invited to attend.

SUBSCRIPTIONS for the new chapel continue to come in from friends in town, and with a little more help it is hoped to dedicate the building free from debt. This is as it should be. Church debts are not usually among the "blessings in disguise."

BAPTIST CHURCH.—Meetings continue as usual on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Sundays, notwithstanding the hot weather. The "new departure" of the pastor in the conduct of the Sabbath morning service, wherein ten minutes of the time are devoted exclusively to the children, is rather novel, yet we must say interesting and profitable. A short talk to the children on some appropriate subject, together with suitable singing, is indulged in before the regular sermon to the older people. Some of the congregation, who rather like the bread and milk diet, this warm weather, and believe that "change about is fair play," have been wicked enough to wish that the good dominie would take to the children forty minutes and preach to the old sheep about ten. Last Sabbath the children's theme was "Wearing Ornaments," which was followed by the hymn—

"Around the Throne of God in Heaven,
Thousands of children stand;
Children whose sins are all forgiven,
A holy, happy band."

heartily sung by the children and grown people. The sermon, a very good one by the way, was on the text, Titus ii: 10: "Adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things."

Jubilee Service at the Methodist Church.

Sunday was the Floral Day in the Park M. E. Church. Never was there more interest manifested than on last Sabbath by the members of both church and school. A correct model in flowers of the new Sunday-school room and chapel was prepared by Messrs. W. A. Francis and J. Cockfain. It was in thirty-three sections, or a section for each officer and class. Passages of Scripture were recited as each section was brought to its place in the building, and the effect was very beautiful and impressive. Among the sections were the foundation stones, cornerstones, doors, windows, and towers. Brief addresses were made by the Superintendent, F. H. Carl, and Rev. Messrs. J. Crawford, J. Searlett, and D. Graves. Rev. Dr. Couch, of New York, greatly assisted in helping to raise money for the erection of the new chapel. The Ladies Aid Society led off with $500. The Sunday-school classes and their friends gave over $700, so that instead of getting $2,500 as the pastor desired, there was given most cheerfully $3,500.

In the evening a jubilee service was held, at which were present Rev. Jno. Crane and Rev. Mr. Howland—a former pastor of the church. Short addresses were also made by prominent workers in the church. The pastor announced that over $3,000 had been contributed during the day towards the completion of the work. It was privately stated that the whole building, including furniture, will cost about $5,000.

Mr. Abel Baker addressed the congregation on behalf of the stewards, setting forth his great interest in the work, and his devout thanksgiving at its near completion. He came to Bloomfield four years ago from a large and enterprising church in Brooklyn, and was welcomed here. He had felt the need of suitably rebuilding the church, and was ready to proceed with the present plans at that time. It had been thought best, however, to postpone for the people had now come forward, and he felt there was only one more thing to be desired—that the people might themselves be led to a more thorough consecration to the cause of Christ.

Mr. E. B. Corby followed in a similar strain, recounting one or two instances of the poverty of the church twenty-five years ago. To be a Methodist then, was in some sense a reproach; persons were converted and then joined some of the other churches because they were more popular. Upon one occasion a Sunday-school celebration was held in a neighboring church, and it was said that seats would be provided for the Methodist school. When the time came to go into the church, they were given seats upon the window sills.

Mr. Albert Field followed with some remarks of congratulation, after which Rev. Mr. Crane spoke of early Methodism in Bloomfield. The Old Stone Church in the Morris neighborhood was founded about 1827, for the joint use of Bloomfield and Franklin. It was a small building, 18 x 20, which remained until it was superseded by the present church. Rev. Mr. Collins used to say that he left the prints of his finger nails upon the stones in the foundation of that church; he had tended mason hammers and trowels hard in the building of his church. Soon after the building of this church, James Wilde came to Montclair and started his woolen factory there. As most of his operatives were Methodists, he helped to build a church where the Washington Methodist Church. Mr. Crane is about to prepare a fuller account of the growth of Methodism in Bloomfield, to be printed for the use of the people here.

Rev. Mr. Howland spoke of the need of united effort, and praised the people for the good work they had done in rebuilding their church.

The Rev. D. R. Lowrie heartily congratulated his people on the success of their noble effort. The corner stone of the chapel was laid on Monday afternoon with deeply interesting services. Rev. Messrs. Cowins, Bout, Tuttle, Ballantine, and Crane took part in the services. Rev. J. Todd, D.D., and Rev. C. R. Bristol, D.D., delivered excellent addresses. The pastor, Rev. D. R. Lowrie, presided. Bishop Harris and Rev. J. H. Knowles, Presiding Elder, were unable to be present because of other important official engagements. They sent their regrets. A number of other ministers were present and a fine audience, made up in part of friends from the other churches in town. There exists a most delightful spirit of unity among the several churches and pastors. Among the things placed in the corner-stone are the names of the officers, teachers and scholars of the Sunday-school twenty-five years ago. Also, the names and members of the school at present, with the names of church officers, members, building committee, contributors to building fund, and many other things, including copies of the BLOOMFIELD JOURNAL and the Advertiser. The future of Methodism in Bloomfield is bright with hope. During the present pastorate over fifty persons have been added to the membership, and the Sabbath-school has greatly increased in numbers and efficiency. A Young People's Association has just been organized, and has already seventy members. The pastor is identified with all departments of church work, and finds a noble corps of willing workers among the officers and members of both church and school.

The Lesson from the Newark Wife Murder.

A short account of the murder of Mrs. Lottie Chisholm by her husband, John Chisholm, on Saturday last, may be found in another column. The affair is one so shocking and painful, we refrain from raking up its heartrending details. We venture, however, a few words by way of comment. A real, deep, and terrible sorrow remains to those who have been thus suddenly and awfully bereaved. The grim shadow of the gallows. Surely he is beyond the reach of legal clemency, and we may well anticipate the judges' sentence, and pray God to have mercy on his poor soul.

This murder was not a "cold blooded" one, as we are wont to say, but hot blooded, heated first of all by disobedience to and abuse of parents. Said one who knew him well: "He was always a bad boy, and got his education on the streets." When will boys learn that God means what he says in the Fifth Commandment; and that the wise man knew what he was talking about when he said, "Honor thy father and mother, which is the first commandment, that thou shalt not break it. Whosoever curseth his father or his mother, he shall surely die." He was always a bad boy, and got his education on the streets.

When will boys learn that God means what he says in the Fifth Commandment; and that the wise man knew what he was talking about when he said, "Honor thy father and mother, which is the first commandment, that thou shalt not break it. Whosoever curseth his father or his mother, he shall surely die." He was always a bad boy, and got his education on the streets.

Another cause of hot blood was the use of intoxicating drinks. What a consuming fire is kindled in a man's nature when he begins a dissipated life! True, we read, "he was sober" when the act was committed, and that makes it all the more inexcusable; but the fire had been kindled, it had been doing its deadly work; it had not only consumed what was good, but inflamed passions that were vile, and debasing. The natural heart of man is bad enough without any artificial means to help it on. "Decide about all things and desire, and he who ventures to add fuel to the flame must suffer the consequences sooner or later. In the olden time a murderer was buried in the cross roads, serving, doubtless, as a perpetual reproach, and a continual warning. Let the details of this awful crime, with the influence leading thereto, be buried at the cross roads of our social life, with suitable epitaph, that our boys, young men, and others, may be warned in time, lest they too fall into like wicked ways.

Any items of interest from the churches and Sabbath-schools in our area, or neighboring towns, will be gladly accepted for publication in THE BLOOMFIELD JOURNAL. Our editorial committee, who have charge of this department, is not biased, and will give to the Eleven Quarters of our own city, neither is he all ears, that he may hear all that is going on among the churches. Nor yet does time hang heavy on his hands, and he obliges to tax his industry for some new process by which to kill it—nay, friends, none of these things, hence he is in a measure dependent on somebody else's feet, ears, and eyes, to help him on in this good work. We do not ask you to send in your items all ready for the press; give us the bare facts, and we will do the dressing up or the "dressing down," as the case may require. We would not have you and more a spirit of union among our several churches, Sabbath schools, and missions, and we believe that properly used the columns of THE BLOOMFIELD JOURNAL will become a happy medium for the accomplishment of this very desirable end.

Our interests are one, not many, and while each church shall strive earnestly to keep up its end of the work, let us feel that we are—
An Army of the Living God,
At His command we bow,
With one end and object in view and willing to do all we can to help each other on in the way to Heaven.

EVERY ship that comes to America got its chart from Columbus. Every novel is a debtor to Homer. Every carpenter who mason himself and toiled hard in the building of a forgotten inventor.—Emerson.
